

The Whats4T? homepage initially welcomes the user and gives a brief summary of the main aims of the website so users accessing the site immediately know what to expect. The navigation bar is simple and displays 3 further navigation links including: > Browse > Login > Register. For improved user experience on different devices, responsive design has been incorporated throughout the project, altering the appearance and layout of the content depending on the device width. The navigation links would be condensed to a burger bar for smaller devices including mobile. Recipes are displayed in rows, with 2 per row for large devices and stacked as 1 recipe per row for mobile devices. Bootstrap frameworks responsive grid system will be used to structure the content. The My Recipes navigation link is displayed across the wireframes but this link would only be available to users who have registered and have an active session. Equally the Login and Registration links would only be visible to users who are not logged in. When a user logs in, these would be replaced with a Logout navigation link. The homepage shows 2 further sections beneath the welcome summary, displaying groups of recipes including: > Recently Added - the 4 most recently added recipes would be displayed in this group to users > Most Viewed - the 4 most viewed recipes would be displayed in this group to users. Each recipe is displayed with the recipe title, summary, views and total time overlaid against the recipe image. The summary field would only show the first line with an ellipsis to indicate to the user that there is more information available. A 'View' action button is displayed underneath to allow the users to view the full recipe details. The footer is kept simple with a copyright logo for the website owner and social media icons linking to the respective social media pages.

The Browse page allows user to search for recipes specifically to match their requirements. 2 key features of the Browse page are the ability to search by the following:-> Keywords - this will search the database for words the user has entered and will display any recipes that match the search terms. The fields to match against will be title, summary, ingredients and tags which should hold the details they'd be looking for.-> Total Time - in addition to searching keywords, the user would also be able to search against the total time field (a sum of the prep and cooking times) and recipes would display that meet the time entered or fall below it. The aim is for the user to identify how much time they have to prepare and cook tea, and recipes that could be made within their timeframe are shown. Matched recipes are then displayed in the same format as on the homepage to keep the structure and styling consistent. A maximum of 10 results will be shown on the page and page buttons will be displayed beneath to indicate to the user that there are further results on additional pages. Where the database does not match any results, a message will be displayed to the user to indicate that no recipes have been matched to their search criteria.

Are you sure you want to delete this recipe?

The Edit Recipe page would only be available to logged in users and the logged in user would then only be able to make changes to recipes they added. The Edit Recipe page would display all of the current details of the selected recipe, with the current image and content, and all fields would be amendable. Fields are configured according to their type and length is also restricted for some including the title and summary. For the fields displaying time, these would be displayed as numeric fields and would only allow number entries to be made. Once the user has finished making changes, they would be able to use one of three actions buttons beneath the form. These include: > Update Recipe - the changes made to the recipe would be updated in the database and any subsequent views would display the revised changes > Back - this would allow the user to return to the View My Recipes page and no changes would be made > Delete - this button would allow the user to delete the selected recipe. To ensure that permanent deletion is confirmed, on click, a modal box would be displayed to the user and they would have to confirm Yes or No as to whether they intended on deleting the recipe. Clicking Yes would remove the recipe from the database and return the user to the View My Recipes page. Clicking No would return the user to the Edit Recipe screen.

Method

1. First infuse the milk to make the béchamel sauce. Put the 1 ½ litres milk, 1 thickly sliced onion, 3 bay leaves and 3 cloves into a large saucepan and bring very gently just up to the boil. Turn off the heat and set aside for 1 hr to infuse.

2. For the meat sauce, put the 3 tbsp oil, 2 finely chopped celery sticks, 1 finely chopped onion, 1 finely chopped carrot, 3 crushed garlic cloves and 140g cubed pancetta in another large saucepan. Gently cook together until the veg are soft but not coloured.

3. Tip in 500g pork mince and 500g beef mince, 200ml milk and 2 cans of chopped tomatoes. Using a wooden spoon, stir together and break up and mash the lumps of mince against the sides of the pan.
